Railroaded The Transcontinentals And Making

Once viewed as a seminal moment in the making of the United States and the West, the events at Promontory Summit and their aftermath receive a great deal of critical attention in Richard White's On May 10, 1869 at Promontory Summit, Utah, the lines of the Union Pacific and Central Pacific Railroads were symbolically linked together to celebrate the completion of the first transcontinental railroad.

The transcontinental railroads of the late nineteenth century were the first corporate behemoths. Their attempts to generate profits from proliferating debt sparked devastating panics in the U.S. economy. Their dependence on public largess drew them into the corridors of power, initiating new forms of corruption.

The heart of White's argument is that because the transcontinentals were built at tremendous cost before there was enough traffic to operate profitably they had to borrow heavily. The railroads sought to pay that debt through the sale of land, given to them through government land grants, bond sales, increasing traffic, or government largesse in the form of favorable legislation.
